

2014 Patelin de Tablas Rosé

Review by Jeb Dunnuck

Rating: 90

While the estate's entry level rosé, the 2014 Rose Patelin de Tablas is a fabulous effort that's loaded with Provencal notes of tangerine, orange rind and citrus blossom. Made from a mostly direct press blend of 80% Grenache, 17% Mourvedre and 3% Counoise that was brought up all in stainless steel, enjoy this balanced, pure, crisp and medium-bodied beauty over the coming summer months.

2014 Dianthus

Review by Jeb Dunnuck

Wine Advocate # 219 (Jun 2015)

Rating: 90

One to the top rosés coming out of California, Tablas Creek's 2014 Rose Dianthus is a blend of 46% Mourvedre, 41% Grenache and the balance Counoise that spent 6 months in stainless steel. It has an almost Tavel-like raspberry color to go with terrific notes of wild strawberries, raspberries, spice and assorted wild herb aromas and flavors. Medium-bodied, full, rich and with some oomph on the palate, it has bright acidity and a clean finish. Drink this beauty anytime over the coming year.
